Comments: I have several concerns about this project in particular, and about town growth in general. This location is obviously not ideal with respect to conservation land and the environment. There are animals who live in this space, or use this space to get from parcel to parcel, and putting up a development directly in their habitat will most certainly prove disruptive. Plus, eventual residents of this development are likely to have to put up with a lot of issues pertaining to these creatures. Additionally, what is the point of putting in MORE houses when there are so many homes in town for sale? How many housing projects have to be started and then abandoned before we as a town say enough is enough. I'm tired of builders starting projects and then having to abandon them. Look at the eyesores on Ferry Street and Cortland Estates - have builders come in and finish those areas before we look to dig up more land and disrupt the environment more than we already have.
